Greetings

Dear Heguru Families,

I sincerely hope that this newsletter helps keeping you abreast of all that is happening at Heguru.

June is another month of great learning for all of us. On behalf of the children, I would like to thank you parents to keep on saturating your mind with lots of knowledge to help you in your parenting.

From the school, we will continue to build what is considered important for our students' knowledge.

Our lessons is specially designed for your children to support their learning from home. With the same emphasis on excellence and high quality of education, our students will be having a fruitful time of learning at home!

Let's continue to work together to create a safe and supportive environment in which all students can pursue great learning experiences and fulfill their unique potentials.

Take care and may God bless us.

Warmest regards,
Mr. Suryanto Lim
Principal Heguru Academy

How to Develop Attachment with a Child

Developing a secure attachment with your child can help them in many ways. Children with a strong bond with a parent/guardian are more likely to have higher self-esteem, perform better in school, have positive relationships, and manage stress. Here are four simple ways you can develop an attachment with your child.

Be Dependable

Your child needs to see you as a safe place. Provide comfort whenever he or she is sick, hurt, or upset. Be physically available as often as possible. When your child feels safe, they can explore the world on their own, knowing they can return to you for security and comfort when they need it. Encourage your child to try new things by showing you believe they can do it on their own, but be nearby in case they need to return to you for comfort.

Be Attentive

Interact with your child one-on-one. Discover activities you can both enjoy, play games together, talk and listen to his or her interests. Take your child's lead on what they need; do not force a specific type of interaction based on your needs. These activities do not need to take up a great deal of time, but it is the affection and undivided attention that is important. Eye contact, warmth and touch, and smiles will help build attachment during these interactions.

Be Predictable

Children need routines to feel secure. Having a routine for meals, bedtime, and any other regular activity helps your child establish self-discipline and security. Knowing what comes next allows children to start the next step in the routine on their own, encouraging their independence.

Be Understanding During Separation

Having your child spend time with another caregiver does not impact your attachment. Your child may create a bond with another person in addition to you. When leaving your child with someone else, establish a goodbye routine. This predictability helps your child feel secure. It is understandable for your child to be unsure, but they will likely mimic your behavior. Be confident and show your child it is not upsetting. If possible, gradually introduce your child to spending time away from you, slowly increasing the amount of time you are gone. Most daycares allow parents to stay onsite with their child to help with the transition. Some children benefit from a security blanket or familiar toy.

Establishing a strong attachment with child is extremely beneficial to them as they grow. Providing security, warmth, and routine allows your child to feel safe and confident when they explore the world on their own.

Mr. Mateus & Ms. Elsa

First time I heard about Heguru when I was in Singapore Airline, I saw a TV program in that plane named "How to raise smart Baby?". That was capture my heart and after arrived in Indonesia, I searched information about Heguru Indonesia. After attended Mr. Suryanto's seminar, I find out that Heguru has unique method and concept, that's why I join Heguru.

Actually, my child doesn't really have any problem in terms of learning, but his kindergarten's teacher said that he was a little bit slow and lack of focus.

After months joining Heguru, I really see tremendous progress in him, especially skills that he needs in his formal school. For example, before joining Heguru, he always resists learning something that require memorization, like language classes, but now, he can easily learn those lessons. He understands easily what we told him and he is very quick in grasping new concepts that we taught him.

And because now he is easy in learning new concepts, automatically his level of confidence improve. I am really satisfied with his achievement after joining Heguru.

Heguru teachers are very skillful, very professional, very discipline and they really know how to handle children. I hope that Heguru can helps more children, have primary school like in Japan as well, so more children can develop their right brain and feel the benefits of the stimulation.

SYMBOLS

This program teaches students about kinds of symbols, such as: road signs, mathematical symbols, currency symbols, Greek alphabets, music symbols, electrical signs, etc.

The students will be introduced with those symbols which are very important for their knowledge.

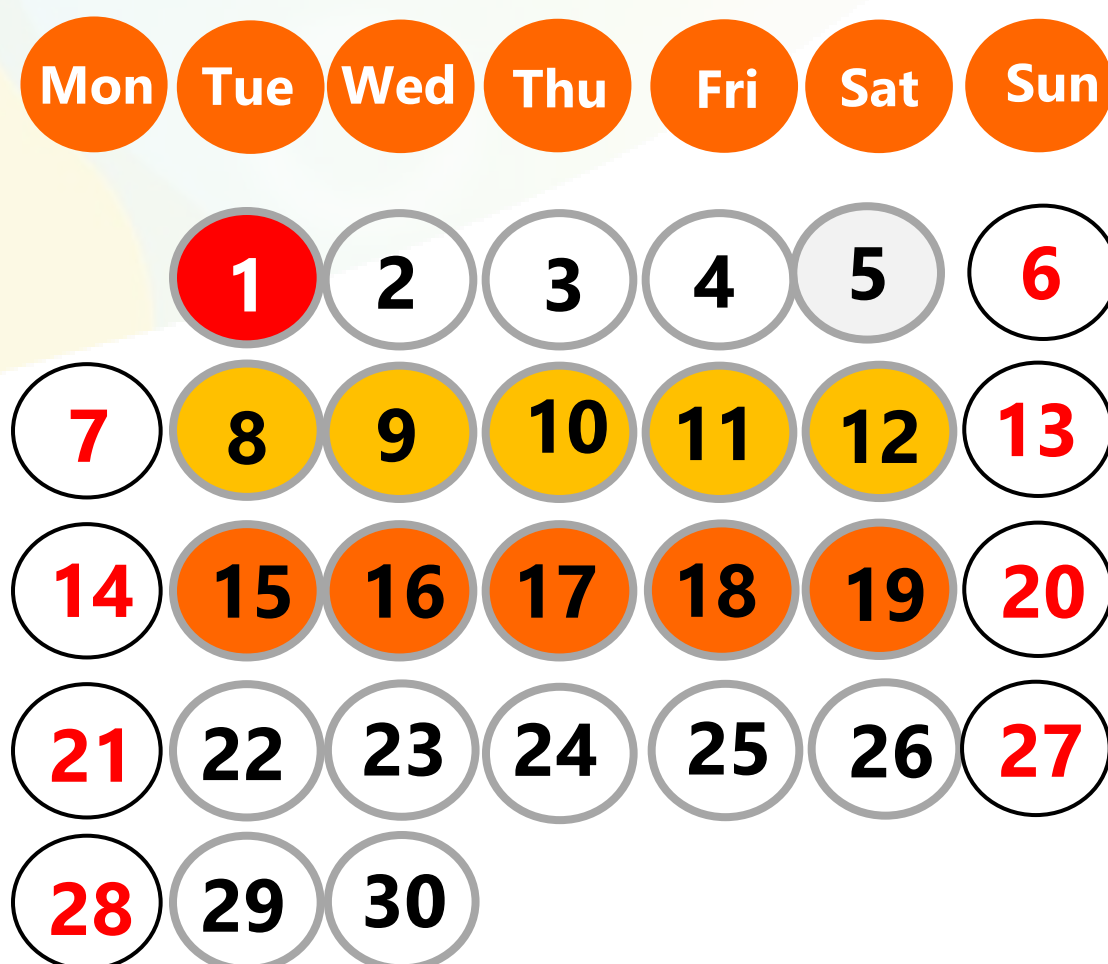

These symbols are related to signs that they often find in their daily lives. And also will be very useful when they enter higher level of education.

It's a good exposure and at the same time it helps students to strengthen their memorization ability.
