Greetings

Dear Heguru Families,

Greetings to all of you, our current and new family members. Thank you for being part of this great learning family.

Please take time to review your child progress on meeting that was provided at the 1 on 1 parents guidance to achieve your child learning goals. Your child learning doesn't stop at school; it continues on.

So please continue to participate and involve in your child's learning. You play the biggest role in your child growth. You can start with a simple question "What are you learning in school today?"

Besides that, please make sure that you are checking your child's assignments that are suggested by teachers. For children above 3 years old, continue to motivate them to finish up S1 and S2.

It is my expectation for our teachers and staff to ensure that all of our children and parents are engaged in a meaningful teaching and learning journey, that always expand the brain capacity.

As always, I appreciate your support to always ignite learning and growing together at Heguru.

How to Get Kids to Help Out at Home

Experts maintain that doing everything for your child is actually doing him a huge disservice. It might seem like he is a happier kid because of his lack of care and responsibilities, but this kind of a lifestyle paves away for a lifelong attitude of “entitlement” and irresponsibility. The truth is that if you give in to every little want and need your child expresses, you are really feeding and nurturing a sense of false entitlement, which can lead to problems later on.

Already, children are being led to believe that they are entitled to receive from the messages they get in the media or from their friends. That sense of entitlement is also cultivated by excessive praise and rewards in normal day-to-day life.

As part of the ongoing battle against this pervasive attitude, it is critical that we challenge our children to work for what they want and be responsible for the results. Teach your child the value of hard work, of sticking to a task, and achieving success through perseverance. As with all other life lessons, this begins in the home.

Getting your child to help with the housework is a wonderful way to introduce them to a sense of responsibility and to challenge them to learn new life skills. Even very young children – toddlers and preschoolers – can help out around the house. And with some guidance and encouragement, you’ll begin to see them stepping out more and more, taking the initiative to “help” you in new tasks, as they grow older.

It helps not to refer to these tasks as “chores” – instead simply refer to them as the tasks that need to be done as a way of life. Be sure to say “Thank you” and praise your children for a job well done. At the same time, don’t be quick to offer praise if they didn’t do a good job. Appreciate the effort, but encourage them to do it better next time around.

Here are a few ways you can ask your toddler to help out for a start!

In the Kitchen:

- ★ Wipe the dishes

Start her off on the plastic and silverware first, before moving on to the more fragile stuff! It can help to invest in a little stool (check out Ikea) which she can stand on so she's right by you at the sink. Or transfer all the wet plates to a towel-covered tabletop where she can wipe them dry.

- ★ Serve the water

The right pitcher for the right job! Look for one that doesn't tip over too quickly, and has a smaller spout or opening where the water comes out.

- ★ Set the table

Again, start with letting him set out the non-breakable items, like placemats and cutlery, before moving on to the breakables like bowls and plates.

- ★ Put the dirty dishes in the sink

Once he's comfortable carrying the dishes about, teach him to stack the plates and transfer the dirty crockery from the dining table to the kitchen sink!

- ★ Keep the groceries

Get your little helper to put the groceries away when you get home. Vegetables in the vegetable drawer, bread on the counter, meat in the freezer etc. You might want to handle the eggs yourself though

Doing the laundry:

- ★ Peg the clothes up

With a stool, your child can help you peg up smaller items like towels, underwear and socks. Don't let her do this unsupervised, however, as laundry areas are typically dangerous zones for young kids.

- ★ Fold the towels

Start him off with learning how to fold square hand towels. It's harder than it looks, for little hands to master, but he'll get there!

★ Draw the curtains

She can draw the curtains every morning, first thing after she wakes up. Before bed, she can pull them shut to keep out the morning sun's glare.

★ Keep books and toys

Don't pick up after your child all the time. Sure, once in a while, it's fine to take over, for example, if you're in a hurry to leave the house. Other than those times, let your child know he has to tidy up his things and clean up one mess before moving on to a new activity.

Around the House

★ Magic mop

Whoever designed the magic mop must have had kids in mind! This "tool" is extremely easy for kids to use, and some of them will love it so much you won't be able to stop them from mopping! Good for daily maintenance of the home...

★ Fill the pail

When it comes to real mopping, your child can help you fill the pail with water for the mop.

★ Remove the covers

Taking off pillowcases is a fun task to do. She can learn to unzip the cases, manoeuvre pillows out, and bring the cases to the laundry basket. Many little tasks in one!

First time I heard about Heguru when I was in Singapore Airline, I saw a TV program in that plane named "How to raise smart Baby?". That was capture my heart and after arrived in Indonesia, I searched information about Heguru Indonesia. After attended Mr. Suryanto's seminar, I find out that Heguru has unique method and concept, that's why I join Heguru.

Actually, my child doesn't really have any problem in terms of learning, but his kindergarten's teacher said that he was a little bit slow and lack of focus.

After months joining Heguru, I really see tremendous progress in him, especially skills that he needs in his formal school. For example, before joining Heguru, he always resists learning something that require memorization, like language classes, but now, he can easily learn those lessons. He understands easily what we told him and he is very quick in grasping new concepts that we taught him.

And because now he is easy in learning new concepts, automatically his level of confidence improve. I am really satisfied with his achievement after joining Heguru.

Heguru teachers are very skillful, very professional, very discipline and they really know how to handle children. I hope that Heguru can helps more children, have primary school like in Japan as well, so more children can develop their right brain and feel the benefits of the stimulation.

IMAGE TRAINING

Image Training is one of fun activities in Heguru which aims to trigger children's imagination. As mentioned in the previous edition, doing activities that use a lot of imagination will build the creativity of children.

Besides, it also helps them to receive the other activities in the class easily. The stories of image training in Heguru involves five human's senses which are hearing, smelling, seeing, touching, and tasting. That is important to encourage children to use their senses. They should try to see the real image of their imagination.

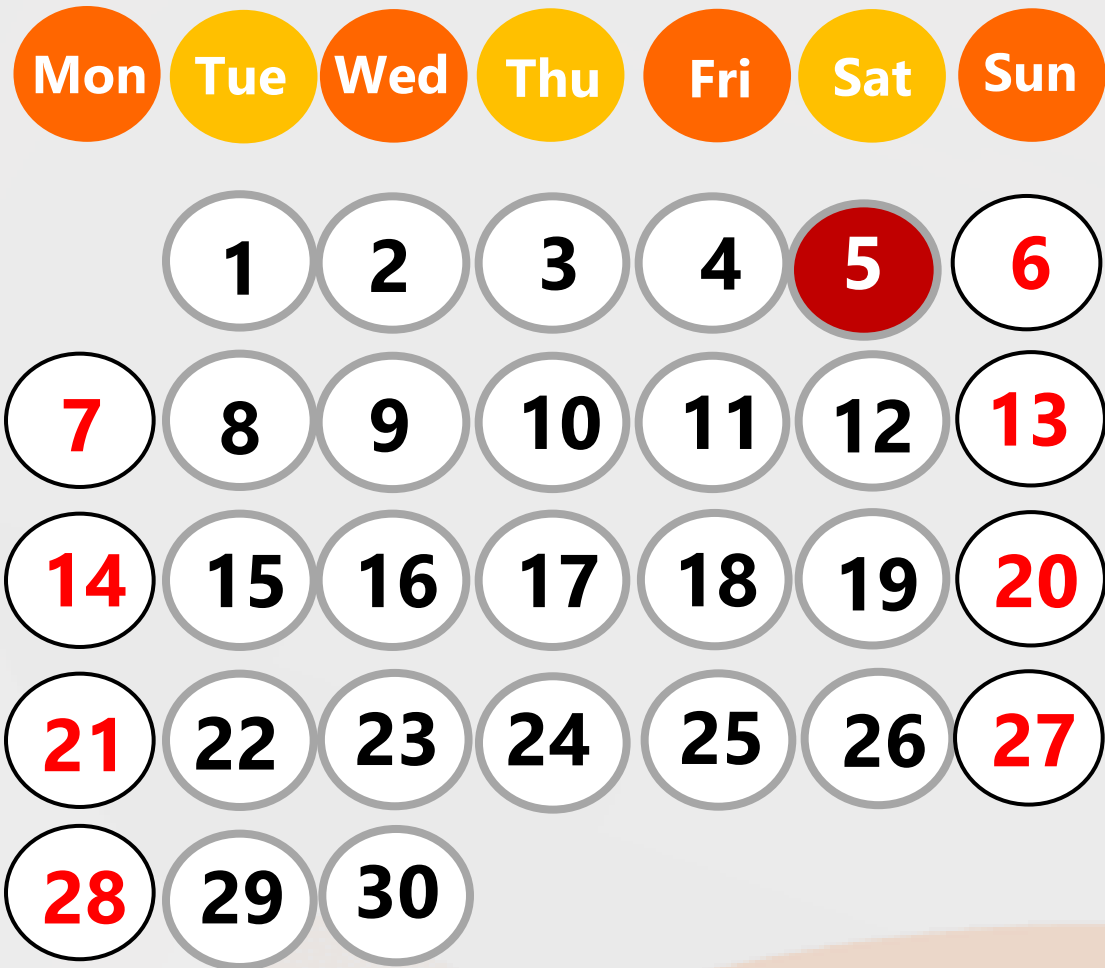

The more they can feel, it means they are able to achieve the higher dimension in their learning. When doing this kind of activity we believe children are able to imagine their own image and situation beyond teacher's story.

And that is a good sign for their development.
